

If you need a piece of stainless or carbon steel cut, punched, drawn, bent, welded or formed into any shape, Precision Press is your best bet. The company has established itself as one of the few local metal pressing operations able to meet the exacting standards of South Africa's world-class automotive industry and is a leading supplier of safety-critical components.

So, if you're looking for a precision-crafted component, manufactured to the most stringent international quality standards, you've come to the same place as some of the world's leading marques have.
